By MILTON BRONNER

Bulletin Press Staff Correspondent

LONDON, June 23.—Ed-ward the Eighth, who has been sovereign of the United Kingdom since midnight of January 20 and who is 42 years old today, has already in his brief reign of five months impressed upon the British people the fact that he is primarily a human being of warm impulses and direct manners.

He neither is nor wants to be a mere stuffed shirt nor symbol of empire. He put it tersely and pathetically in a recent short speech in which he said:

"I am the same person I was when I was Prince of Wales."

For the British that simple statement had a wealth of implications. As Prince of Wales he had always been an intimate of the people in a constitutional kingdom allowed him to be known the world over as the "Prince of Wales."

DR. MORRISH ELECTED WITH BIG MAJORITY

Increased and the ultimate result was placed beyond a doubt long before the official count was completed.

Miss Cranford heard her defeat about 9 p.m.

From the time earliest returns began coming in, Dr. Morrish was the centre of an enthusiastic and gratulatory crowd, and when victory was assured he was the centre of an ovation.

Jumping to the platform at the Liberal arena, Cranford addressed the quarters while cheers from several hundred throngs in his ears, Dr. Morrish told his supporters: "Principles of the Liberal party are upheld by my election tonight, and I feel believe the Liberal will pull us out of our difficulties."

So great was the enthusiasm of the crowd that Dr. Morrish was forced to speak several times, while his audience waited to play to their lungs with a series of "hurrahs."

At the conclusion of his address, the new King member of the Alberta legislature, stepped into the makeshift platform where he thanked his friends and the gathering.

"It was a hard-fought campaign, there was a little bit of a fight, but the people today as far as I am concerned, I believe they were tired—and so am I."

APPEALS FIGHT
Immediately afterwards all you've done for me, and you can expect me to carry on the same kind of fight, that I have carried on for the school board for the good of every citizen in this city."

Continuing, he stated that the campaign headquarters, Dr. Morrish had put up in a modest and clean fight and had kept away from personalities.

"I wish to thank the Edmonton Bulletin for the large part of my campaign," he stated. "I presented my platform and policies throughout the campaign, and I am glad to have been able to get them before the public, and the unwelcome criticism I received from the Bulletin since I was given the Liberal nomination was a big factor in the Liberal victory of today."

Following his speech at the campaign headquarters, Dr. Morrish addressed a brief address to the Legislature in which he thanked electors for electing him to great honor in his best in promoting Liberalism for the good of all.

Election day passed with little incident. There were no crowds, no crowding at polls and few complaints.

VOTE VERY SLOW
The voters were slow in turning out. Polls early in the day were slow in the afternoon, and slow before closing at five o'clock.

It was only after 5 o'clock that the heavy voting of the day started, and from then on a steady stream of voters went to the polls.

When polls closed at 7 p.m., the deputy returning officers at the polls immediately started the count and with party scrutineers close at hand watching the process.

As boxes were counted the results were interpreted in by party headquarters.

OFFICIAL COUNT MADE
As soon as the count at the polls was completed, the deputy returning officers immediately proceeded to the returning officers' headquarters, 1047 10th street where the official count was made.

Returning Officer Clayton Adams had all his arrangements in order, and the first of the boxes arrived at headquarters at 7:30 p.m., and after a 30-minute delay, the count was under way from the 40th until the last arrived at 9:30 p.m.

At Mr. Adams' office a highly efficient staff of 14 counters awaited the boxes, and went to work with little delay.

Dr. C. D. Wolfe, former teacher at Victoria high school and director of vocational training in city schools, was in charge of the count.

GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT
R. A. Andison, chief electoral officer and clerk of the executive council was on hand exercising general supervision over the conduct of the whole.

Under the watchful eye of Mr. Adams, whose efficient conduct of the election as returning officer has been a general rule, the business of winding up the election moved smoothly to its conclusion.

SHORT RESPIRE
By 11:30 p.m. the count was well advanced, and Mr. Adams and his staff while the counters paused for breath and fell upon a hearty repast.

Fort McMurray, June 23.—The Liberal party has been elected to the seat to be installed in the Murray station of the Royal Canadian Signal, according to reports from the office.

It is expected that a complete new radio station will be built this fall to accommodate the new equipment.

Apparently cooperation with Canadian Air Service, the Signals are installing radio-telephone transmitters to be used in communication with the aircraft both in the air and on the ground. This service should be much toward making northern air-traffic more efficient and safer than ever.

While aircraft communication is being carried on about-way, increasing business of a strictly northern character is being handled by the installation of modern long-range transmitting and receiving equipment.

OLD DRURY'S PEG IS FINE SCREEN FARE

Rialto Screening a Touching Old World Romance

By FIRST NIGHTER Backgrounded by the colorful life and customs of the early Georgian era, "Peg of Old Drury" starring Anna Neagle, one-time big-name star of Hollywood who graduated to the leading British stage, opened at the Rialto theatre Monday night as the leading feature on a two picture program.

Especially photographed, a virtue that has long been lacking in British productions, "Peg of Old Drury" is a film that Hollywood would be hard put to equal.

A colorful costume drama, highlighted by heart-moving pathos and rich comedy, the picture tells the story of the rise of Peggy Woffington from obscurity to the best loved actress on the London stage, and with dignified and restrained treatment outlines her famous romance with David Garrick.

Especially played excerpts from Shakespeare including the famous speeches from "Richard III," "The Merchant of Venice" and "As You Like It," form classical highlights of the rich entertainment.

An old story, Peg's romantic life is given new vim by the screen treatment. Peg leaves her lively Dublin home to go with her husband, Michael, played by Jack Hawkins, to London to be married. He takes her to Drury Lane where she meets the famous actor, played by Sir Cedric Hardwicke, and through him reaches the stage.

Under the guidance of the master actor, her rise is rapid and as the Chevalier Cheven, famous old actor in Fleet street, she numbers among her friends such luminaries as Horace Walpole and Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Her faithful lover intrudes in her life, discussing the matter with Garrick, but after a fast moving interlude of comedy and drama love triumphs and she leaves Michael for good.

In love with Garrick and he with her, she dare not tell him that her life and happiness are threatened by a weak heart. She goes on to play her last role as Rosalind and collapses. While the audience pounds out for certain calls she dies in Garrick's arms and the heartbroken tells the theatre: "My Peg cannot come to you herself but she sends her love."

It is one of the most moving scenes the screen has yet unfurled. Second feature, "Old Drury Afternoon" stars Frances Lederer.

STRIKERS TO RESUME WORK

BRUSSELS, June 23.—The controlling trade union committee, controlling the bulk of the 600 strikers in Belgium last night ordered a resumption of work Wednesday.

The decision was taken unopposed, the committee of the National committee's resolution declared "the objects of the strike were attained for the immense majority of the workers."

The Ohio state highway department reports that Friday and Saturday are the two days when most women drive.

Whale By Tail

Who hasn't heard about the big one that the fishermen didn't bring home? Well, someone caught him at last. He's properly named Colonel, weighing 40 tons and is over 25 feet long, and has caused no end of comment in cities where he has thus far made a "personal" appearance on his transcontinental tour. In addition to the whale, the specially built bridge steel rail car carries many other interesting species of marine oddities, among which are two giant octopus, pilot fish, swordfish, the Seattle sea monster, and the only travelling exhibit of live penguins in America. The 100-foot railway car will be placed Wednesday, June 24, on a siding near the old C.P.R. depot at 9th street, and the exhibit will be open to the public from noon until 11 p.m. daily until Saturday night, June 27.
